

What is Familial Dysautonomia?

Familial dysautonomia or FD is a very rare, life-threatening, genetic, neurological disorder. The disorder disturbs cells in the autonomic nervous system which controls involuntary actions such as digestion, breathing, production of tears and the regulation of blood pressure and body temperature. It also affects the sensory nervous system which controls activities related to the senses, such as taste and the perception of pain, heat and cold. There is currently no cure for FD.
